97.450proved For Release 2003/12/02 : CIA-RDP75-00001R000300020008-5 Circ.: e.

104,169

Front

Edit Other Page 7

New Yale Chaplain, Ex-CIA Agent, Believes Soft Life Hurting U. S.

William Stoane Coffin, Jr., new chaplain of Yale "We've got to be real tough University, is a forceful young man with a down to earth with ourselves to keep up with approach to religion. A former CIA agent who had close contact with the Russians after World War II and again We'll have to decide what we in the early 1950s, he believes that America is being want and be willing to sacrifice dangerously weakened by soft living and the reluctance of most people to take an unpopular stand.

A sturdily-built man of five foot 11, the Rev. Mr. Coffin at 34 pipe smoker.

He walks briskly around the him Mr. Coffin or Bill.

No conformist, William Coffin seems to have carefully avoided any set pattern in shaping his own career, Before World War sic School. After the war, in Rock Road, which he served as a liaison officer with the French army in former Eva Rubinstein, daughter Europe, he returned to Yale to of the pianist, Artur Rubinstein. study political science. In 1949-50 he studied for the ministry at Theological, Seminary; from 1950 to 1953 he was in Europe with the Central Intelligence Agency, and in 1954 he returned to Yale to complete his preparation for the ministry, with his decision to become a minister.

"It's not so hard to under-11, the Rev. Mr. Coffin at 34 stand," says Bill Coffin, "when you realize how many of us are afraid to stand up for what we ped hair and horn-rimmed glass- know is right. Haven't we had es, he favors jackets and slacks examples in this country where and moccasin type shoes. He has demagogues have won wide supa deep speaking voice and is a port and few people have had the courage to fight for just but unpopular causes?"

Born in New York in 1924, Mr. campus making his calls, or, if Coffin is the son of the late Wilhe is making longer trips, such liam Sloane Coffin, Yale 1900, as to the Medical School, he who was president of the Metrorides a motor scooter. Many of politan Museum of Art and vice president of the W. & J. Sloane his close undergraduate associ- Co., New York furniture firm. ates are uncertain whether to call His brother, Edmund Coffin, was in the Class of 1943.

His family traveled extensively when he was young and he has lived in California, France and Switzerland. He attended Phillips Andover, before entering Yale. II he planned to be a concert His mother now makes her home planist and entered the Yale Mu- in New Haven, living at 189 East

> Mr. Coffin is married to the She is a ballet dancer and actress who toured Europe in the musical "Oklahoma!" and appeared in the Broadway production of "The Diary of Anne Frank." They have a small daughter, Amy, and a second child is expected.

While an undergraduate at Although he is the nephew of Yale, Coffin was president of the the late Rev. Henry Sloane Cof- Yale Glee Club and chairman of fin, Yale '97, who was president the Yale Chapter of the Ameriof Union Theological Seminary, can Veterans Committee. He was he says his family had little to do also a member of the Undergraduate Board of Deacons of Yale's Church of Christ, of the Elizabethan Club and of Timothy | tion of the Russian people to have Dwight College.

Russia," he insists. "We can't be some of our comforts in order to attain the goal."

Although Mr. Coffin sees little chance in the near future of a revolution in the Soviet Union, he does see hope that the government may be forced to grant the people more freedom. In order to make economic progress, it has been necessary to educate. the masses and improve living standards.

The Communist leaders face a dilemma: how to grant economic freedom without giving up political control. The desire for freedom can never be suppressed, Coffin is convinced.

He got to know many Russian soldiers and officers during the two years after World War II when he was a liaison officer, first in Czechoslovakia and then in Germany.

"At first we had very friendly relations with them," he recalls. "The soldiers of the two nations celebrated victory together and it seemed that we would always be friends.

FRATERNIZATION STOPPED

"But then the Communist leadlonel, a political officer, tell a ministerial studies to serve three three-star general who was criti- years in Europe with CL cizing Soviet bureaucracy to shut "I'm constantly asked how I things under control and our to intelligence work and back to friendly relations were ended. It was very frustrating to see this happening and be unable to do anything about it.

How can a relatively few Com-munists, dedicated to totalitarian-ism, control the natural inclina-the ministry again," he says. "The only answer I can give is that some of the most idealistic, dedicated men I know are working for the CIA. It was during the Korean War, a very critical period in our relations with Russia. I had served as a liaison officer with the Russian army after World War II and I know the language well. I felt that I was needed in Europe and that it was important work."

Because of the cloak of secrecy which covers CIA operations, the Yale chaplain does not discuss this phase of his career. His experiences, however, have left him with deep concern about the ability of the West to compete with Communism.

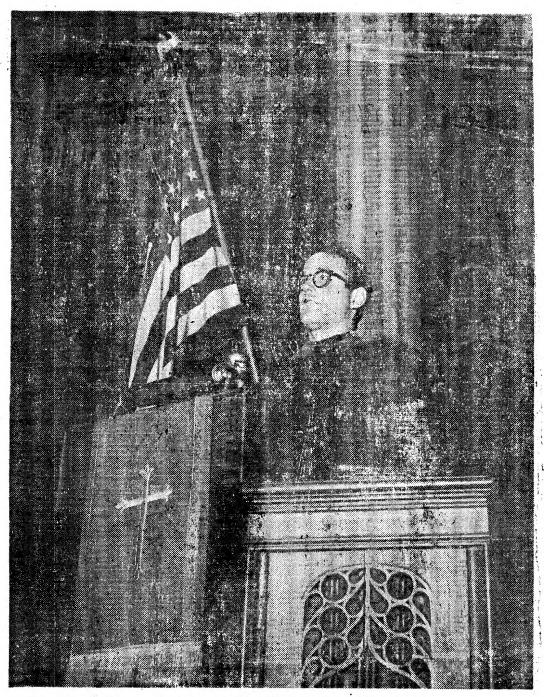

WAS A SKEPTIO

"While I was an undergraduate," he says, "I was skeptical of organized religion and the value of many church activities. It wasn't until my senior year when I attended a conference at Union Seminary and saw some of the work being done by young ministers in East Harlem that I realized that church programs can be relevant to the issues of the day."

Coffin was graduated from Yale in the class of 1949 and the ers became alarmed about this next Fall he entered Union Thefraternization and took measures ological Seminary. But the folto stop it. I heard a Russian co-lowing year he interrupted his

up. The Communists quickly got could switch from the ministry

CONTIN

HARD-hitting sersions on controversial subjects are packing chapel.

Rev. Sidney Lovett, who retired and "fill the back rows of Battell last June. The youthful and ag-I for quite a few days as well." gressive Bill Coffin made quite a contrast to soft-spoken and gen. wide area of activities. There are ial "Uncle Sid" Lovett who now daily services at Battell Chapel, is serving in Hong Kong with Sunday worship, undergraduate Yale-In-China, but they got along courses in religion, counseling of fine together. While a divinity students and many undergradu-

In 1956-57 he was chaplain at Andover and last year was chap other campuses. lain at Williams College.

Scholarship Prize.

problems and that religious faith Hillel Foundation at Yale. may provide the only answer, but "I'm sorry to say he beats" they take a show-me, no-nonsense me," says Yale's chaplain, a attitude. We have to show them keen competitor. that Christianity and Judaism have a great deal to say in every area of human life - student problems, marriage, domestic issues and international affairs."

To stimulate interest in religion among students, the chaplain is starting study groups and forums in several schools of the university. A group at the medical school is discussing the moral and ethical problems that must be faced in the medical profession. A similar group at the law school will consider religion and the law. One of the student organizations is sponsoring a talk by the Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro leader of Montgomery, Ala.

In his first few weeks in the pulpit at Battell Chapel the new chaplain made it plain that Yale students will be given something to think about in the weeks to come. In his inaugural sermon he lashed out at both Communism and America-firstism, atomic war, segregation and "phony religion." At Williams College he aroused some students by his open eriticism of the fraternity system.

His vigorous sermons on controversial subjects drew attention in a recent issue of "Ivy Magazine," an undergraduate publication which contended that Mr. Coffin has "created something of a sensation with his radical approach to religion." Ivy predicted that the new chaplain. will probably succeed in "nailing" quite a few of the non-combyterian students. Approved For Release 2003/12/02: CIA-RDP75-00001R000300020008-5 closely with his predecessor, the mitted religious drifters at Yale

The Chaplain's duties cover a ate activities in social work and religion. The Yale Chaplain frequently is asked to preach at

He believes that college stu- Rev. William Coffin finds time Despite his busy schedule, the dents today are more receptive to relax with his family and to to religion than students of less troubled times. "They're con. continue his interest in music cerned, but not committed," he and the theater. He enjoys sport says. "They feel that the various and plays tennis with David 'isms' have failed to solve our Schimmel, the director of the Approved For Release 200311 2021 19C (A) IND Pote angular Reng 3000 20008-5 scooter.